CONNECTORS USED IN COMMUNICATIONS INSTALLATIONS

1. There are in existence copies of a draft EMER Tels A 764 which were circulated to certain units for assistance in the identification, manufacture and repair of cables and connectors used in radio installations.

2. These draft EMERs are now obsolete due to the change-over to NATO stock numbers and other factors. Consideration has been given to updating the draft and issuing in the normal manner but due to metrication of cables now being supplied to ORD this has proved impracticable. Certain information and drawings are available and any unit requiring assistance in the manufacture or repair of specific cables or connectors should apply to:
